In trimming that Christmas tree, be aware of the chances for fire.

Mr. DeBoer takes some of the newspaper criticism like a novice in politics—too seriously.

The Boston Herald calls for a disposal of the Richeson case without the necessity of a trial. A great many people will say "Amen," but without knowing how exact justice can be done without a calm deliberation of the findings in the case.

In calling Lieut.-Gov. Slack a "possible candidate for promotion," the St. Johnsbury Republican did not hit a popular chord, much as the people may like Mr. Slack, because the "promotion" idea long since became distasteful. Those who want Mr. Slack would probably like to have that "promotion" idea obliterated.

Barre at least is not deluded in the belief that recent timetable changes on the Montpelier & Wells River railroad have "practically put Barre and Montpelier on the main line" of a railroad, as the Waterbury Record suggests. Barre will never admit it is a main line, so long as it is tucked away on the extremity of a railroad system. When the main trunkage of a great railroad system is laid through the most feasible route in the state of Vermont—Williamstown Gulf via Barre—then Barre will be prepared to agree with its contemporary, and things do seem to point in that direction more powerfully than ever. However, we are not blind either to the better facilities which the Boston & Maine control of the Montpelier & Wells River line is giving Barre and Montpelier.

The protest by a writer in the current issue of "Stone" against the plan of advertising new granites by declaring that the granites compare favorably with older granites of well-established renown is made, even though the persons making the assertions may think themselves qualified to compare the products. It is a convenient way of establishing a market value—to declare the product as good as some other which the public knows about, or even to assert that it is better than the old; but it tends to hurt the already established product, either in loss of business or damage to reputation, after the newer product has been discovered to be inferior. For instance, Barre dislikes to have the reputation of its granite traded upon by the exploiters of any chance outcropping of rock which may be discovered in any locality. Let the new establish its trade mark without trying to steal the reputation of some other stone.

Teach the Children To Save

Children need to be taught the lesson of THRIFT and the gift of a bank book is a good way to begin the lessons.

CHRISTMAS is almost here; better come in and get that book to-morrow.
